

ABACA, in Botany, a kind of flax or hemp, gathered in some of the Manillas or Philippine Islands. This plant is sown every year; being gathered, it is steeped in water, and beaten as hemp is. It is of two kinds, the white and the grey. The white abaca is used for making very fine linen; but the grey is employed for nothing but cordage.